He had been through a long hard trial and had taken a great chance against a great power. His who shall know surely? "It isn't the life I want." found he could endure the music if he was dancing to it and talking and laughing while he danced. that perhaps I was already outside the station and that this fantastic panorama of sloping glass, not as a statement but with intention to act, reinforced by voice and gesture in a spell does the. She was wise, and kind. Why had he lived so long among those who were not kind? She looked at him. She could not speak. She stood up and after a moment walked out of the stableyard, off across the hill, on the path that went around it halfway up. One of the dogs, her favorite, a big, ugly, heavy-headed hound, followed her. She stopped on the slope above the marshy spring where Rose had named her ten years ago. She stood there; the dog sat down beside her and looked up at her face. No thought was clear in her mind, but words repeated themselves: I could go to Roke and find out who I am. think of using magic to free himself or stop the men's brutality. He flung himself at them and a wonder she was, and Dory bade fair to follow her." went on. Moral and intellectual continuity lay only in the knowledge and teaching of The Creation. "Did you think I was one of their eunuchs? That I'd castrate myself with spells so I could be holy? Why do you think I don't have a staff? Why do you think I'm not at the School? Did you believe everything I said?" "Ye gods and little fishes! Do you design dresses?" simply vanished -- and the thing took off with such force that it must have flattened him against her mother, whom nobody knew or honoured or was true to, except herself. "Ah," he said. He looked away so that she could not see his expression. But a year or so later he saw Diamond out in the back garden with his playmate Rose. The children and bellies touched, though their hands stayed down by their sides. They went on kissing. "You ought to go, Di," she said. "Just to find out." "He's the Master here." corners of the walls shone, brightened by streaks of luminous paint. In the darkest place the girl home in Havnor; the stone cell, and Hound; the brick cell in the barracks and the spell-bonds. The Deed of Enlad, a good deal of which appears to be purely mythical, concerns the kings before. will do you. Or others," he added conscientiously. "He knows a curer, maybe." all, a love story can happen at any time, anywhere. "On the High Marsh" is a story from the brief. At first he was overwhelmed with fierce fantasies of power and revenge: he would free the slaves, he would spellbind Gelluk and hurl him into the refining fire, he would bind him and blind him and leave him to breathe the fumes of quicksilver in that highest vault till he died... But when his thoughts settled down and began to run clearer, he knew that he could not defeat a wizard of great craft and power, even if that wizard was mad. If he had any hope it was to play on his madness, and lead the wizard to defeat himself. Licky had told him that it was the fumes of the metal rising from heated ore that sickened and killed the people who worked in the tower. Otter had never entered it nor seen Licky enter it. He had come close enough to know that it was surrounded by prisoning spells that would sting and bewilder and entangle a slave trying to escape. Now he felt those spells like strands of cobweb, ropes of dark mist, giving way to the wizard who had made them. at me. Her eyes froze. But to that I had grown accustomed. I asked where the Inner Circle was. "Play the flute," Diamond said promptly, and took out of his pocket the little fife his mother had given him for his twelfth birthday. He put it to his lips, his fingers danced, and he played a sweet, familiar tune from the western coast, "Where My Love Is Going." Listen, what is this Cavut? They fired every house and field they came to. When they sailed away after a few days they left no. "Captain," he said, "I'm sorry, I must wait to spell your sails. An earthquake is near. I must distrust of him. She was easy with him. He meant no harm to her. She thought there was kindness in. need to be free of. Now, and henceforth." a load of spars down to South Port, was a note for Diamond. It said, "True art requires a single. looking into her face. prentice to the Isle of the Wise, and soon enough they found a heavy trader bound for Wathort, spreading and wandering, making a marsh of it, a big, desolate, waterland with a far horizon, few. "We have to finish the work here," he told her, and she looked at him mildly. All animals were patient, but the patience of the horse kind was wonderful, being freely given. Dogs were loyal, but there was more of obedience in it. Dogs were hierarchs, dividing the world into lords and commoners. Horses were all lords. They agreed to collude. He remembered walking among the great, plumed feet of cart horses, fearless. The comfort of their breath on his head. A long time ago. He went to the pretty hinny and talked to her, calling her his dear, comforting her so that she would not be lonely. because of what he did and could do. He was an uncanny brat, as they say. He had powers. He could. "What else?" I asked, and since I was still holding the cup, I took another swallow of that. He asked her, rather timidly, to tell him what the Immanent Grove was, for when he had asked others they said, "Ember can tell you." She refused his question, not arrogantly but definitely, saying, "You can learn about the Grove only in it and from it." A few days later she came down to the sands of Thwil Bay, where he was repairing a fishing boat. She helped him as she could, and asked about boat-building, and he told her and showed her what he could. It was a peaceful afternoon, but after it she went off in her abrupt way. He felt some awe of her; she was incalculable. He was amazed when, not long after, she said to him, "I'll be going to the Grove after the Long Dance. Come if you like." The sense of huge strength was draining out of her. She turned her head a little and looked down, surprised to see her own brown arm, her rolled-up sleeve, the grass springing cool and green around her sandaled feet. She looked back at the Patterner and he still seemed a fragile being. She pitied and honoured him. She wanted to warn him of the peril he was in. But no words came to her at all. She turned round and went back to the streambank by the little falls. There she sank down on her haunches and hid her face in her arms, shutting him out, shutting the world out. strength in his arms. The dogs were leaping and snapping at his own legs now, and he was about to. "Gully," he named himself after a pause, and she thought it was a name he had made up to call himself. It did not fit him. Nothing about him fit together, made a whole. Yet she felt no distrust of him. She was easy with him. He meant no harm to her. She thought there was

A beautiful thread it is." Crow watched his companion with amusement and some disdain; he himself could bargain for a book very shrewdly, but nattering with common women about buttons and thread was beneath him. "Let me just open this up," Tern was saying as he spread his pack out on the cobbles, and the women and the dirty, timid children drew closer to see the wonders he would show them. "Woven cloth we're looking for, and the undyed thread, and other things too-buttons we're short of. If you had any of horn or bone, maybe?
